1. _____

Do you need a sofa or an interesting piece of art? Try a garage sale! In a garage sale, people sell items that are “like-new” or gently used.” Usually they happen in a person's garage or yard on the weekend, when the weather is nice. “I get up early on Saturday morning and drive around to all the garage sales,” says Patricia Evans, from Austin, Texas.

2. _____

Garage sales, also called yard sales, have many items for sale. You can often find old clothing, used books and toys, and even furniture. There's a lot of junk at many garage sales, too — old stuff and broken things.

There are many reasons to have a garage sale. The Thomas family is having one on Saturday. Wendy Thomas wants to clean out her house. 4. _____

Tony Lazarri goes to garage sales all the time. “They're like affordable gift shops. You can do all the shopping in one place and spend very little money. They're great!”

Funds for Charity

Funds for Charity is a non-profit organization that raises funds for a diverse group of charities. It was started more than a decade ago by a group of retired men and women who wanted to help the needy living in Redview Estate. Their actions prompted a revival of charity work in the estate and the organization rapidly grew in size. Many people eagerly came forward to help the needy.

Funds for Charity organizes an island-wide event to raise funds for the needy four times a year. Previously, events like food and game fairs, flea markets and sports tournaments were held. These events were highly successful. To date, all the funds have been effectively channeled to a variety of charity organizations, helping both the young and the elderly.

This year, we hope to raise funds for charity while providing a platform for family bonding and healthy living. If you have never run a marathon before, now is the time to do it! This non-competitive run will help you to challenge yourself while doing your part for charity at the same time. Encourage your friends to join you or form a team with your family!

次の英文を読んで、設問に答えなさい。

[1] Often on TV or in magazines we see the rich and famous: successful film stars, singers, and sports people. They live in beautiful homes. They drive expensive cars. They even have their own planes. Sometimes we may think,“(a)Wouldn't it be great to be like them!” But how do we know the rich and famous are happy?

[2] Most of us are not famous or rich, and we have to work hard for our money. But sometimes we spend it on things we don't really need: an expensive pair of shoes, the newest mobile phone, or the biggest TV screen. We sometimes even want to change our physical appearance; we tell ourselves it would be great to be slimmer or to have younger-looking skin! But do (b)those things really make us happier or healthier?

[3] Of course, money is important. We need it to have a comfortable place to live and to pay the bills. But money isn't everything. If we work too much, we may not have time for family or friends. If we think only about the expensive things we want to buy, we might forget to enjoy simple pleasures, like a walk in the country, a conversation with a good friend, or simple meal at home. As the song says, (c)“Money can't buy me love!”

[4] We all want to be healthy and happy, but (d). Studies show that many things can be important, and they connect together in different ways.

[5] When we are born, we already have a kind of photo of our (aa lives) inside us. Because of our DNA, we might have more or fewer physical problems than other people. We are also emotionally different from others.

[6] Studies have been done on identical twins that were separate as babies and brought up in (e) environments. As adults, they still had very (f) physical and emotional (g) and (h). Scientists believe that DNA is partly responsible for their personalities. They say that each of us has a kind of (i)natural happiness point. This decides how happy we are likely to be. When bad things happen, we can fall below this point, but we will return to it with time.

[7] (j)So happiness does not depend so much on how many good or bad experiences we have but on how we see those experiences. One person's problem can be another person's (k). You may see a glass that is half (l), whereas your unhappy friend sees a glass that is half (m).

[8] Think about this question:

You have planned a picnic in the countryside for your birthday. On the morning news, they say it might rain. What do you do?

- A) Tell your friends there won't be a picnic and stay at home alone feeling depressed.
- B) Have the picnic in the park near your house. If it rains, you can invite your friends back home.
- C) Have the picnic in the countryside as planned. It might not rain, and if it does, maybe it will be fun to get wet!

[9] Which answer would make you the happiest? Remember: To be happy and healthy, we have to be confident, cheerful, and hopeful about the future!

[10] In a recent Gallup study, one million Americans were asked about their (bb lives): happiness, work, illnesses, stress, etc. From the results, Alvin Wong, a 65 year-old Chinese-American, was found to be America's happiest man. He is married with children, (cc lives) in Hawaii, and has his own business. When talking about the secret of happiness he said, "You don't do things just for money. You do things because you want to do them, you love to do them. This is what's going to make you want to get up in the morning."

[11] Some scientists say that our natural happiness point explains about 50 percent of our feelings. Our life experiences probably explain another 10 percent. But amazingly, about 40 percent of our ability to be happy is within our power to change. Personality is not like eye color. We can change the way we think and behave.

[12] French scientist and writer Matthieu Richard has been called the world's happiest man after scientific studies were done on his brain activity. He is a Buddhist, and he (dd lives) in the Himalayas. He says that happiness is an ability that everyone can learn.

[13] There are two sides to our brains. The left side is connected to feelings of happiness, and the right side is connected to unpleasant emotions. We can learn through meditation to use the left side more often. The idea is to think about experiences that have made us truly happy – on the inside – instead of those short moments of excitement that pass quickly.

[14] Happier people also live longer. The world's oldest person was Jeanne Calment, who died in 1997 at the age of 122. At 120, she said the secret of her long life was having fun and enjoying nice things.
